MEMO

December 7th, 2011

The Stanford University Occupational Health Center (SUOHC) and the SLAC Occupational Health Center (SLAC OHC) will be closed during the University’s Winter Closure and New Year’s Day holiday from Monday, December 19th through Monday, January 2nd. Both clinics will resume normal business hours on Tuesday, January 3rd, 2012. This planned closure follows the schedule approved by President Hennessy and Provost Etchemendy for the University.

During this time period, newly injured employees may be referred to Alliance Occupational Medicine for initial evaluation and management, as well as for any follow-up care indicated during OHC closure. Similarly, employees with an ongoing workers’ compensation injury/illness should be referred to Alliance during this winter closure period if they experience a significant change in their condition and require non-urgent medical evaluation. Beginning Tuesday, January 3rd 2012, all injury and illness care will be transferred back to SUOHC and SLAC OHC.

For new injuries and illnesses that require immediate evaluation and management, employees will continue to follow current protocol and proceed directly to SHC Emergency Department.

The medical directors of SUOHC (Patrick O’Callahan, M.D., 650-725-5440) and SLAC OHC (Rich Wittman, M.D., 650-926-4382) will be available by telephone to assist with any urgent questions during the winter closure.

Alliance Occupational Medicine has two clinic locations:

- 315 South Abbott Avenue, Milpitas, CA 95035
  (408) 790-2900
- 2737 Walsh Avenue, Santa Clara, CA 95051
